

Tom wakes up. He does not know it yet, but he's destined for great things. Great things.

All his life, Tom hasn't found anything he really excelled at. He was an average sort of person. He got Bs in school, played a few video games, liked basketball and skiing, and had a few friends, none of them very good. Then he met Dylan.

Dylan was not an average sort of person. He was quite the opposite. He excelled at most things. He got As in school, won an eSports Championship, as well as being the best Golfer in the State. However, he had no friends. None. Sure, he had a few people on the golf team he was friendly with, but he didn't have any "real" friends.

Tom met Dylan at...

Originally Written: High School, Book 2